FEAR GERMANY WILL FORCE DRASTIC ACT

Five lives were lost as a result of the attack. There had been very doubtful whether the American people would react to the attack—the severity of diplomatic relations, for instance—against Germany unless American lives had been sacrificed again.

The reports from Queenstown and Liverpool as to missing Americans seem to leave little room for doubt on this score, and President Wilson. It is feared, is now confronted with the necessity of determining what the action of this government shall be. It is taken for granted on all sides in Washington that if the official reports of the Arabic incident are true, this government cannot with dignity protest again to Germany. President Wilson's "deliberately unfriendly" note was the last warning likely to be done, however, until a formal inquiry has been made through Ambassador Gerard as to the sinking of the Arabic and Germany has had an opportunity to disavow the act of her submarine commander.

The fear here, of course, is that a diplomatic break between Germany and the United States would be only the beginning of more serious trouble. More submarine attacks by Germany would be certain to force the United States forward a step further toward open cooperation with the allies.

If President Wilson decides that it is necessary to act, the belief here is that he will call Congress together if only to obtain a large appropriation for the improvement of the national defenses. Some of the President's most influential advisers have urged him, ever since the submarine issue began to show signs of becoming acute, to call Congress together for this purpose. It was their belief that such a move on the President's part would have a wholesome effect upon the authorities in Berlin, who have been credited with the belief that the United States would not under any circumstances risk a serious break with Germany on account of the submarine issue.

The great White Star steamship was sunk Thursday by a German submarine off Fastnet Rock, near the Irish coast, just forty miles southwest of the spot where the Lusitania was torpedoed, as shown in diagram. The Arabic was 600 feet long, her beam was 65.5 feet and her displacement was 15,801 tons. Many of her survivors were landed at Queenstown. The Arabic was on her way from Liverpool to New York.

POLICE UNEARTH INSURANCE FRAUD

Two Men Arrested, Charged with Swindling Company.

LARGE SUMS INVOLVED

Scheme Was to Take Over Lapsed
Policies, Report Holders Dead, and Collect Money.

Public investigation into alleged extensive manipulation of a scheme whereby it is said thousands of dollars have been fraudulently obtained from the Prudential Insurance Company, resulted yesterday afternoon in the arrest of Charles H. White, 21, of 1212 Q street northwest, and Edward S. Englar, 23, of 1009 Eighth street northwest, on charges of false pretenses.

The men arrested have for some time been employed as outside agents and collectors for the company, local offices of which are in the Commercial National Bank Building, Fourteenth and G streets northwest. The arrests were made by Central Office Detective Sergeants Burlingame, Bauer and Ed Kelly, on complaint made by Philip A. Ross, one of the officials of the company. Bond was fixed at $3,000 each, but at an early hour this morning the men were still being held.

Detectives say they have found an extensive conspiracy to defraud the company out of considerable sums of money. The scheme was for two of the conspirators to take over lapsed policies, report the supposed policy holders dead, and then collect the insurance from the company. As there are many lapsed policies in all insurance companies, particularly in the industrial branches, the two collectors found a large field for their activities.

Conspirators Divided Spoils.
When a policy holder would announce that he was unable to continue payments two members of the band are alleged to have secretly taken over the policies. They then secured from another party to the conspiracy bogus certificates to the effect that the policy holders were dead. These certificates, duly sworn to and with all the appearances of being bona fide, were turned into the company. The result was that the payment was promptly made, the conspirators dividing the spoils between them.

It is said that the scheme has been in operation for a considerable time, and that a large amount is involved, although the individual policies were comparatively small.

One of the persons whose policy was taken over was a woman arrested here last winter on a charge of robbing the United States mails. She is now serving a two-year sentence in a Federal penitentiary.

Officials of the company suspected nearly two months ago that fraudulent transactions were taking place. They reported the matter to the detective bureau and Detective Burlingame was assigned to the case. For six weeks he worked incessantly on the case collecting evidence.

ITALY DEBATES TURK TAX.

Rome, Aug. 20.—Turkey declares she is willing to allow Italian citizens to leave Turkey, but insists upon them paying enormous taxes and giving up all their gold. It is learned from authoritative circles here.

The Italians refused to submit to such conditions, and demand action on the part of their government.

The Italian cabinet considered the question today.

Guardsman Saves Girl from Drowning at Colonial Beach

Young Woman Refuses to Give Name—Machine Gun Company Has Strenuous Time with Its Mules—Big Crowd Is Expected Today.

By A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.
Camp Ordway, Colonial Beach, Va., August 20.—Private Harry E. Diver, Company B, Third Regiment, was the central figure in an exciting incident on the beach here yesterday afternoon, when he rushed to the assistance of a young woman who suddenly found herself in deep water while bathing at the freight wharf.

With a number of members of Company D, Diver was taking advantage of the excellent bathing when he heard a cry for help and immediately started out after the struggling girl, along with several others who were in bathing and two men in a canoe.

Diver was the first to reach the girl, and placing his left hand under her arms, succeeded in bringing her to shallow water without assistance.

The young woman, who came to the beach yesterday afternoon with a party of friends to spend the day, refused to give her name, but was profuse in her thanks for the aid rendered.

Capt. J. H. Bryson, in charge of the regiment, informed a busy time this morning treating about fifty cases, most of which were the result of the heavy storm Monday. The other cases consisted of sore arms from the vaccine for typhoid, which was administered early in the week, and illnesses resulting from change of diet and water.

Three in Hospital.
Only three cases were of enough importance to require the patient to remain in the hospital and five others were detained in their company quarters. The seriously ill were William Pizzanilli, private in Company C, and William Field, private in Company H. Pizzanilli was delirious part of last night, when he was brought to the hospital for treatment, and has a high fever. For a while it was thought that he had appendicitis and he will probably be sent home if his condition does not improve.

Yesterday evening Dr. Harrison, of Colonial Beach, sent a request to Capt. Bryson for a detail from the regimental infirmary to take one of his patients from the barracks to the St. Johns hospital, transportation to Washington. A detail consisting of George J. Allen, Robert F. Wells, and John E. Shell was sent to the hotel and rendered the service requested. The patient in question had come to Colonial Beach from Fredericksburg, when he developed pulmonary trouble.

Thus far the camp has been one of the healthiest in years, but much anxiety is felt over the threatened shortage of water. The camp is using the same water as is supplied to Colonial Beach. It comes from artesian wells. Lately considerable sediment has been noticed in the water, together with a much diminished flow, and an order has been issued to conserve as far as possible the supply. Should the artesian water run out the District guardsmen face a serious problem.

This morning the large drill field selected by the regular army officers, who are here as instructors, was used for the first time for the maneuvers. The instruction having progressed to the point where the other field was too small. Three battalions took part in the evolutions, the problem being that of a landing force marching on the town of Williamsburg and being opposed by six companies of the enemy.

Gen. Glendie B. Young gave instruction in the use of the pistols which were issued the day before to the officers of the Third Regiment, when the officers met for their noonday call today, after which they joined the noncommissioned officers' camp, 4,500 rounds being on hand for this purpose. The same amount was in the little schoolhouse and listened to an interesting lecture on tactics by Capt. H. P. Hobbs, U. S. A., covering the ground of tomorrow's drill. He explained how it was the duty of an advance guard to clear the way and secure the advance of the main body and how the subject of tactics was constantly becoming more complicated.

He pointed out how important it is that subordinate officers should understand the plans of their superiors, so that in case they fall in carrying out the instructions given they will be able to do the next best thing to fit in the general scheme.

Capt. John W. Gehman, officer of the day, reported fifty men who overstayed their leave last night. Only five of these were confined to the guardhouse. The most serious trouble that has occurred here since the camp opened happened yesterday when Richard Hill, cook, in Company M, assaulted William Wilcox, assistant cook, in the same company, with a butcher knife. He was immediately arrested, placed in the guardhouse, and court-martialed. He was sentenced to be dishonorably discharged and to forfeit all pay. He will be confined in the guardhouse until his discharge is received.

Field Map Completed.
Maj. F. B. Wheaton has completed his field map, showing the maneuver grounds and the topography of the country hereabout, and it is expected that the date of the sham battle will be announced in a few days.

The machine gun company had a busy day today, working with their guns and packing and unpacking their outfit on the backs of the eight mules provided for this purpose. In the morning a squad in command of Lieut. P. L. Baldwin went through the gun drill, consisting of running forward with the gun, setting it up, aiming and firing. On another part of the field, a squad under command of sergeant J. W. Spear, with Corporal A. P. Dudley, Troop K, Fifth Cavalry of Fort Myer, as instructor, was busy all morning packing the mules and trying to get them to carry the loads without running away and smashing things up generally.

In the afternoon the company went through the whole drill, marching onto the field in one unit, unpacking, setting up guns, firing, repacking and marching off again. The boys are so tickled with the new "toys" that they are paying no attention to drill hours and yesterday put in several more than were required.

Tomorrow morning at 7 o'clock the machine gun company will steal away quietly with their mules and guns and fire real ball cartridges at the target ordered today by telephone from Washington for use Monday. The arrival of the machine guns and mules has caused quite a commotion here, the applications for transfer to the machine gun company coming in at the rate of about twenty a day.

Sixty rounds of blank ammunition have been ordered from Norfolk for the navy gun, which is used here for salutes at sunrise and sunset and salutes to officers on certain occasions when they visit camp. Thirteen shots will be fired Sunday morning when Maj. Gen. George H. Harries, retired, comes from Washington. He will be met at the wharf by Gen. William Harvey and staff, and on his arrival in camp will be paid the full honors due his rank.

Shuddered Under Blow.
"Most of the passengers were on deck when the attack was made. The air was clear and the sea calm. I was looking through marine glasses at the time and saw the wake of the torpedo as it sped toward the ship, but I did not see the submarine."

"The torpedo came at enormous speed, striking the Arabic on the starboard side, and the sea calm. I was looking through marine glasses at the time and saw the wake of the torpedo as it sped toward the ship, but I did not see the submarine."

"The vessel began to sink even before the waters cast up by the explosion had subsided."

Passengers Calm When Torpedo Struck Arabic

Survivors Tell of Struggle with Waves When Big Boat Went Down After Attack by Submarine of Kaiser.

Queenstown, Aug. 20.—There was a marked absence of panic on the Arabic when she was torpedoed by a German submarine.

"There was naturally excitement and some confusion, but no manifestation of frenzy or wild terror," declared C. H. Pringle, of Toronto, Ont., one of the survivors. "Women and children were placed in the life boats first and very quickly they were lowered over the side. As the ship settled very quickly a number of persons, including some women, jumped into the water, but they were dragged into the boats or upon the life rafts."

Shuddered Under Blow.
"The boat was so crowded that I loved myself into the water. When the Arabic plunged to the bottom I was carried down by the suction, but I fought my way to the surface, where I came up amongst a mass of wreckage. I saw a lifeboat about fifty feet away and swam toward it. The people in the boat did not see me and I was almost dead when I reached it. I clung to a plank and clung to it until I could signal another boat, which took me on board. I did not know until I reached Queenstown, whether my daughter and brother had been saved."

Among the other passengers rescued was Stella Carol, a singer known as "Stella the Lark," who is going to America to fulfill a contract.

WILSON TO TOSS BALL.
Will Go to Ball Game if Weather and State Affairs Permit.

Weather and the international situation permitting, President Wilson will toss the first ball in the double-header to be played at American League Park this afternoon to raise funds to defray the expenses of the G. A. R. encampment. Local civil war veterans are interested because they want funds for their encampment next month. Baseball fans are interested because both games are expected to be closely contested.

The first game will be between teams representing the Department of Agriculture and the Department of Interior. St.
